Melanson's Death May Balk Nurse's Award of $7500

Terms of Sportsman's Father's Will Leave Estate to Wife, Child

Capricious fate appeared today to have defeated the $7500 court verdict awarded Miss Celia Hammond, Timothy N. H. nurse, through the death of Gregory H. Melanson, Swampscott sportsman, just nine months short of the time he would have received a fifth of his father's $800,000 estate.

Miss Hammond was given the award in Suffolk Superior Court in a sensational breach of promise suit against Melanson, in which she charged he promised to marry her while yet married to his wife, Phillips Melanson, socially prominent daughter of a Beverly physician.

NAMED CORRESPONDENT

Prior to bringing of the breach of promise suit, Mrs. Melanson had won a divorce decree from her sportsman-husband, naming Miss Hammond as correspondent, on the basis of letters furnished her by the nurse.

As another development in this novel situation, under terms of the will of the father, Joseph I. Melanson, wealthy shoe manufacturer, the four-year-old daughter of Melanson and his divorced wife appeared to have inherited her father's share in the estate, cutting off the $7500 claim of Miss Hammond from the estate.

Attorneys for the New Hampshire nurse separated Melanson's personal estate today, seeking property real or personal upon which attachments to satisfy the court judgment might be obtained.

PROBE BOAT PURCHASE

Reports that Melanson, just before his death at Woburn, N. H., Sunday night, had planned to visit Salem, to conclude terms for purchase of the $300,000 schooner, Anna Lee Ames, had attracted for the (Hammond) girl to believe he may have died possessed of a substantial personal estate.

Officials Pay Wed Second Child Bride to Filene

City Council Expresses Regret; Farley Sends Message

Boston and Washington officials went on record today in official expressions of regret at the death of Edward A. Filene, prominent Boston merchant and economist, who succumbed to fatal Sunday. Sponsored by Councilors David W. Blackman and Sidney Towneberg, the Boston City Council passed this resolution:

"The City Council of Boston expresses its regret at the passing of Edward A. Filene, whose life is an example of the opportunities which America offers to all, and whose death during that lifetime will deprive his country of a prize among the merchants of our country, kindly in his philanthropies, gentle in his love and consideration for his fellow man."

"Boston has lost one of its most distinguished citizens, and the United States a fine, noble character—whose name may properly be inscribed in our country's roll of honor."

In Washington, said Democratic Committee Chairman James A. Farley:

"This country lost, in the death of Edward A. Filene, a power for good that will be sorely missed."

"He was a wealthy man, and one of those to whom wealth meant little but an opportunity to be of service to his fellow man. He was a great Democrat."

PHILADELPHIA, N. J., Sept. 28 (AP)—Following guilty of bigamy after marrying his second child bride in six years, Jacky Thompson ("Bud") Platt, 27, 27-year-old mountain boy, today was held with out bail. He may get 10 years in prison.

Amazing story of the backwoods youth was unfolded following his arrest for marrying his second child bride, 12-year-old Helen Black, without divorcing his first, 13-year-old Mertie Ward. He explained he thought his first wife got a divorce, although I never saw no papers nor nothing.

The second marriage, performed by a justice of the peace at their-ettown on September 12, was attended by Helen's stepfather, Joseph Knapton, and her mother. They and the girl were 15.

Mrs. Knapton said I had to marry Helen." Platt testified in court. "But now I know she ain't that way."

"I LOVED HER," SAYS GIRL

But Helen's unsophisticated, sunny schoolgirl told a different story as she described their life-long friendship.

"We loved Bud a long time," she wept. "I asked him to marry me. We were very happy, but then he had to go away for a while. After the wedding the couple spent a few days with his family, then a few with his. The affair then broke up when Helen's absence from school was investigated. But today Helen said:

"I had got back to school. I'm going to stay home and wait for Bud."

Saying she had put away her dolls for good, the child added proudly:

"I'm a married woman and got a right to have my husband."

NEVER DIVORCED

The first Mrs. Platt, now 18, hadn't seen her husband since he was arrested in 1933 and served time in a reformatory for bigamy and kidnapping. She declared they were never divorced, but said she couldn't stand living with him.

Likewise Platt's mother had little sympathy for him.

"I had him but hadn't ought to do it," she declared. "But then, he always liked these young'ns."

He a contemner, the weather-work in which Helen, the second bride, is named Thompson. And it had its name long before the famous play by that name came Broadway.

Freddie's Case Up Friday

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 28 (AP)—First steps in a renewed battle for custody of Freddie Bartholomew, 13-year-old movie star, were under way here today.

Through Attorney Avery Blumkin, the parents, Carl Llewellyn and Lillian May Bartholomew, filed notice of motion for cancellation of an adoption order of last April, giving custody of Freddie to his aunt, Miss Mollie Bartholomew.

Superior Judge Robert Scott set the hearing for next Friday. The motion charged fraud, but did not elaborate on the nature to which the adoption was allegedly obtained.

Ex-Bank Teller Gets Jail Term

Breaching guilty to misappropriation of more than $1200 of the funds of the State Street Trust Company, Harry H. Pearson, 42, of Newton, a former bank teller, was sentenced to serve one year in jail by Judge Hugh D. McLaughlin in Federal court.

Judge McLaughlin also imposed a suspended sentence of one year and a day on other counts of misappropriation.

The government, represented by Attorney J. A. Anderson, July A. Cannon, said the count that Pearson had taken the money to play the stock market.

Forced to Wed, Bride Charges

Annulment Sought by Cohasset Woman

Alleging that her father and mother had been by her to a wedding ceremony with Gordon Pratt of Woburn, the former bride of a previous today in Dedham probable court to have the marriage annulled.

In the petition she filed that the marriage was performed at Cohasset last April 18, but declared Pratt was not her husband.

The marriage, she declared, was entered into by her only because her mother and father, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Pratt of Cohasset, threatened to put her out of their home.

At the time, she said, she was without employment and unable to support herself, she says in the petition.

The unusual suit was filed by Attorney J. Maurice Maguire of Woburn, counsel for the bride.

To Wed Film Actor

N. J. Mountain Boy, 27, Faces Long Term as Bigamist

Mrs. Frederick L. Ames of Boston, actress-widow, whose husband was killed in a plane crash in 1932, will wed Stanley Smith, Hollywood actor, in the film capital on Thanksgiving Day. She met her future mate on a singing concert tour.

Thanksgiving Marriage for Ames' Widow

Mate of Sociolite Killed in 1932 To Wed Actor

Plans for November nuptials were announced in Hollywood, Calif., today by Mrs. Frederick L. Ames, actress-widow, the Boston sociolite killed in an airplane crash in 1932 and Stanley Smith, screen juvenile.

They will be married on Thanksgiving Day.

Mrs. Ames has spent several months in the cinema capital, completing a successful concert tour of Europe.

A professional singer and entertainer, before her marriage in 1928 to Ames, Boston and North Easton sociolite, at Niagara, Mexico, the widow made a comeback as a mezzo-soprano singer two years after her husband's death.

Boston gave her an appreciative audience, after her New York debut. Later, she toured Europe by steam, scoring one of her largest successes in London.

Smith, juvenile of "Young Man with a Gun," "If I Were a Love Among the Millionaires," originally appeared for Pathé, and later was put under contract by Paramount. He has appeared in London legitimate stage plays as well.

B. C. Expedition Arrives Here

Evidence of man's existence on earth 30,000 years B.C. was unearthed in the mountains near Chinar, Azil, Syria, by two Western College Jesuits, who returned here today after a two-year archaeological expedition financed by Boston College.

The Jesuits, Rev. Joseph W. Murphy, S. J., and Rev. George J. Gahagan, S. J., returned here after a two-year expedition here aboard the American Export liner Eschscholtz, that they had excavated "upper paleolithic" remains of "European culture" which determine the age of man. Packed in trunks, the Jesuits brought back with them for further study were scores of specimens. Found near Tel-Aviv, excavations dating back 20,000 and 30,000 years.

Also debarking here were Mr. and Mrs. Margaret, of Angkor, Turkey, and the two-year-old daughter, Berna. Other passengers on Eschscholtz, returning to study sanitary engineering at Harvard University.

Others stated that under its direction, the Phoenician Turkey is becoming a modern civilization.

Romance Traces Erased in Wally's London Home

By KINGSBURY SMITH International News Service Staff Correspondent

LONDON, Sept. 28.—The stately home at 36 Clarendon terrace, where the world-famous romance of the Duke and Duchess of Windsor blossomed, is about to play a dramatic role as the residence of a 62-year-old English glass manufacturer, International News Service learned today.

The house has been purchased by William A. Bailey, who has made a fortune from the main factory of glassware. Painters and cleaners are preparing the residence for occupancy of Bailey, his wife and four children.

"The manufacturer, who knew the Duke and Duchess, slightly was nettled today when asked how he came to buy the house, and whether he felt that within its walls had thrived an empire and cost a king his throne moments of the famous romance still might live."

"I do not wish to be said with aspersions," he said with a smile, "but my private affairs should interest the world. I will not say who I bought the house. It is entirely my business."

For two months after the affair was focused the eyes and heads of the world on 18 Clarendon terrace, was Andrew Parsons, aged caretaker of the house.

I found him watching slyly with pointers dotted on the last traces of "Wallis Warfield Simpson," traces such as the delicate pink and blue and rose with which she had her house decorated.

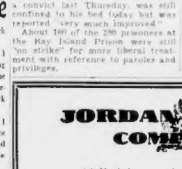

"It was a great romance," he said with a sigh. "The old place never will witness such a romance again."

I remember seeing Mrs. Simpson standing on the terrace in the shadow of the great trees in front when she expected the Duke to come and visit her.

Flood of Votes '3 of a Kind' Call Health Hand

Foley Still Strong Second in Straw Ballot Test

By FRANK K. REILLY

An avalanche of ballots swamped the offices of the majority straw vote editors of the Boston Evening American and Boston Sunday Advertiser today as former Governor James M. Curley remained in first place in the tabulation.

Scores of ballots postmarked November, South Boston and Roxbury were credited to District Attorney William J. Foley, who was a strong second.

School Committeesman Maurice J. Tobin, who is in fourth place, continued to narrow the gap between himself and former Representative Alfred Santovese of Hyde Park, who retains third place.

NICHOLS TAKES 5TH
President John J. Fitzgerald of the Boston City Council received a high vote today and surrendered fifth position to former Mayor Malcolm E. Nichols whose Jamaica Plain and West Roxbury friends gave him substantial support.

Charles I. Mawer, Republican candidate, and Catherine A. Brett, the Social Justice nominee, made a better showing today than at any time within the past week. The vote for former Mayor Arthur H. Hood, the Back Bay Communist candidate, were insignificant today.

Both Curley and Foley show strong outside strength and it appears that they will continue to be active in each of the 22 wards from Roxbury and Brighton to South Boston, to receive the bulk of his vote from North End and East Boston.

It is the desire of the editors of the Boston Evening American and Boston Sunday Advertiser to determine the true strength of each of the 20 candidates in the majority field.

EVERY BALLOT NOTED

This poll is being conducted for that purpose alone. Every ballot received is credited to the man for whom it is marked.

There is no favoritism or bias in the making of this tabulation. Readers of these newspapers indicated the election of Mayor Mawer in 1932. Judging by the interest shown to date in this contest they easily may name the winner this year.

50,000 at Polls Ross Is Feared Slain or Dead Of Fright

7th Mass. District Election Draws Large Turnout

About 50,000 voters in 11 cities and towns in the Seventh Massachusetts District went to the polls today, despite rain, to cast ballots in the special election for one of three judges seeking to fill the unexpired term of the late Congressman William P. Connery, Jr. of Lynn.

Democratic leaders are pinning their hopes on Lawrence J. Connery, brother and former associate of the late congressman.

The Republican party, making its most aggressive campaign in 15 years in the district, has endorsed Edward D. Sims of Lawrence.

Republicans have charged their attacks on the administration's reciprocal trade treaties.

CONCLUDE CAMPAIGNS
The third candidate, Dr. Fred G. Bushnell of Lynn, has concluded his campaign, under the Union party banner, is expected to draw a good vote, but is not considered a serious contender.

The fight remains strictly between the major party candidates.

Last night all three candidates wound up their brief campaigns in a whirlwind of street rallies, door-to-door, radio talks and meetings with party leaders.

In a last minute effort to rouse the voters from their local lethargy, in viewing a special election, prominent Republicans in the district and state leaders were called to the support of their favorite candidate.

In an effort to garner every possible vote.

A heavy vote for the district was expected by the district party workers believe that if half that number turn out for the special election, their vote will be as good as won.

Sherborn 'Rule' Hit by Scanlon

Declares Key Posts Held by Californians

LAWRENCE, Sept. 28 (AP)—Charging that "substantially all the key positions" at Sherborn Reformatory for women were held by citizens of California, Representative Louis J. Scanlon today made public a letter to Governor Charles F. Winter, suggesting the removal of these officials.

"This is not a healthy condition," Scanlon, who represents the Third Essex District, in his letter specifically declared that the superintendent, the librarian and others in charge were from California.

"Eighteen officers were picked at random," Scanlon continued, "and of these it was found that eight were from California, five from other states in the Union and one from England. The rule appears to be that no resident of Massachusetts is eligible for employment."

was disclosed when he was relieved of the regular list of civil cases. The reason the special Treasury agents want the exhibit—its contents—so badly, is because they include bank statements, book accounts and other records of Dolan and the Legal Securities Corporation.

They were part of the city's case, which proved that Dolan made $131,563.90 "illegally."

PROBLEM UNDOUBLED

Meanwhile the problem of securing the exhibit themselves had not been solved by the Treasury agents, so far as a lawsuit.

Under a new federal act, the "treating order" is empowered to issue its own subpoenas on those who fail to answer demands voluntarily.

There were many reports of subpoenas being prepared for those who failed to get at the exhibit.

There was a report that an order would be made on John P. Connolly, clerk of the Suffolk superior court, in whose custody the exhibit are now.

But lawyers and Chief Connolly would not be liable to such a subpoena since he is the representative of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts and the state is a sovereign in itself in such matters—not subject to federal powers.

So far as the law goes, the exhibit may remain in the clerk's office for two years and cannot be given up unless claimed by the proper party.

Legion Cruise Liner Home

Turned by the West Indian sea 350 Legionnaires and their wives today debarked in Boston from the chartered liner, Esquimaux, and including their New York-Bermuda convention cruise.

The casualty was listed, Sergeant Thomas J. Garland, of the Salmon police, fell down a companionway during a storm on route to Bermuda, breaking his left knee cap and right arm.

When the Esquimaux docked at St. George's, Bermuda, Mayor Thomas J. Mayer, threw open the city to the "boys" and their wives, a parade held on the last day of their stay was the feature of their visit.

The Legionnaires were treated to an added thrill on their return voyage when a British tanker asked aid for a sick man.

Dr. William Ballard of the Esquimaux, wireless directions for treating the man and just as the boat docked today word was received that the seaman was recovering.

Boys and Girls in Teens Flock to Join Florida Klan

Organizers There Openly Boast Of Strength

The revived Ku Klux Klan is going strong in Florida where efforts are being made to enroll boys and girls from 16 years up as well as men and women, W. W. Chaplin discloses in the seventh article of his revealing series on the present status of the Klan in America.

By W. W. CHAPLIN
International News Service Staff Correspondent

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Sept. 28.—The youth of Florida, boys and girls from 16 years up, is being recruited in a mammoth drive of the Ku Klux Klan largely directed by the 21-year-old son of the state's grand dragon, I learned today.

I came here because Imperial Wizard Hiram W. Evans told me in Atlanta that Jacksonville had the "best crowd" of any city in the country and that the Klan was booming throughout the state.

I found it was no exaggeration and that the growing force are true. Jacksonville, Tampa and Daytona are all big Klan centers for Klan strength. The estimated Klan vote here and in other cities showing increased strength in competition to their population.

Of the state's 60 counties, 40 have been "organized" by the Klan. Rich public and private life of the state is infiltrated with Klan membership.

Klansters are at work throughout the state signing up through women, boys and girls, and 12 new Klans have been established since the first of the year.

FEARS NO CURB
The Klan is openly boastful of its strength and success in Florida. It is the grand dragon of the Klan realm of Florida and found his headquarters in his downtown office with his son, Frank.

Chief Justice, grand state leader of the hooded knights, is on the state payroll as a state prison warden. During the three days he was in the Klan, organization work routine is carried on by his son, who was not born when the Klan was founded in Georgia in 1915.

Frank, 21, is a handsome, well-dressed man with brush of white hair.

"The Klan is booming here and it will grow similarly in other states. It almost died in Alabama, and is largely inactive there now. But Dr. Evans has asked me to reorganize that state as imperial wizard, and I shall probably accept the job."

"The Klan is strong and we would welcome an official investigation. If there is a congressional inquiry we can spread on the record just what the Klan is accomplishing and what it stands for. We have nothing to conceal, though of course we keep the secrets of the organization."

The grand dragon, who has sharpened his mind and occasionally interrupted a remark, said:

"Women come to me and complain about their husbands running around with other women. I tell them to go to hell. There is no violence in the Klan. In Florida, it is all talk. There is no violence in the Klan. In Florida, it is all talk. There is no violence in the Klan. In Florida, it is all talk."

With parental pride the captain told how he had planned to send his son to college when he finished high school. But the Klan insisted on entering Klan work instead. Now he is a "state propagating officer," in charge of organizing new Klans with particular reference to boys and girls, and is part time boss of the whole state organization while his son is in the Klan.

The youth himself, speaking with the trained voice of an experienced organizer and public speaker, told me:

"The young people of Florida are coming into the Klan because they want to. They approve our aims of white Protestant American supremacy and think we have found the means of securing it. They're coming in and they're taking an active part in Klan activities. This movement, which was spread to other states and bring new life to the Klan throughout the country."

Under the leadership of Capt. Garcia, the Florida Klan never had the great time that it now state itself easily in the depression.

There was a recession, but it was treatable compared to that in other states and now that is almost all ended up and Florida is far to have the greatest Klan membership in history by another year.

For his next article, W. W. Chaplin will tell more details of the rebirth of the Klan in America.

Canadian Wife Asks Divorce in Salem

Judge to Determine if She's Eligible for U. S. Action

SALEM, Sept. 28.—Before Mrs. Edna K. Moore of Lynn can sue for divorce, Judge Edward B. O'Brien will have to determine whether an unmarried resident is entitled to such action, he said today.

Mrs. Moore, a Canadian, returns to Quebec once a year to report to Canadian immigration authorities, she explained, but then she lives with a sister in Lynn the rest of the year.

She seeks to divorce Thomas R. L. Moore of Three Rivers, Quebec, claiming he forced her and two infant children out of their Three Rivers home in 1931.

FLUSTERED BY QUERY
Mrs. Smith blushed and stammered.

"Well, perhaps," "You're hopeful?" "Well, I suppose I could find some way if I tried," the petitioner replied.

She then remarked that the father might be having custody of two boys of the couple and make them live out of them. Then she took care under advisement, she said.

Promotion Seen For Dolan

Promotion of Judge Arthur W. Dolan of Suffolk Probate Court to the Supreme Judicial Court, and legal advances for friends of Governor Hurley during the last year, following the resignation of Justice John Crosby.

Justice Crosby's resignation, however, will not be accepted until the end of the month by the Governor. It was said, making the 70-year-old justice eligible for a pension of three-fourths his annual $14,000 salary.

John V. Mahoney, secretary to the Governor, is slated for the $11,000 a year post as judge of Suffolk Probate Court. It is reported, his place as chief secretary will probably go to Paul C. Ryan, with William P. Gormley of Jamaica Plain apparently due to receive Ryan's present position.

Mayor Seeks Son's Parole

N. H. Executive Asks Release of Youth

CONCORD, N. H., Sept. 28.—With national attention focused on this state parole system, the state House was crowded today as Mayor Daniel C. Murphy of Manchester sought parole of his 20-year-old son, John, from State Prison.

Pleading before the Governor's Council that the son had learned his lesson after serving three years of an 18½ sentence for burglary and larceny, Mayor Murphy pledged himself to direct the youth's future.

Because Governor Francis Murphy was not present at the time the council met Mayor Caron said he must return later to repeat his petition.

Chief Police James F. O'Neill of Manchester was a witness at the hearing, ready to present John Caron's record—which he said showed two or three minor offenses besides the major conviction.

O'Neill remarked that he did not care to record himself either in favor of, or in opposition to the parole.

Office Is Ready for Black

WASHINGTON, Sept. 28 (AP)—Except for such minor details as hanging the windows in his office, everything is ready for Justice Hugo L. Black today in the Supreme Court on Monday.

Nationwide interest has been kindled by his seating because of allegations that he is a member of the Ku Klux Klan.

Black, in a letter to the court, said he was not a member of the Klan and that he was a member of the Episcopal Church.

sters and dramatic schools who are to be seen by the judges.

Still held in secrecy, however, is the decision of the judges as to the final winner of the Talent Quest—with an opportunity to appear at a cinema production.

Today they previewed the screen tests, carefully noting the reactions and features and action of each talent quester from the Boston area.

Time and again the pictures made here in Boston under auspices of the Boston Evening American and M. G. M. were shown.

In time for showings on Friday those same screen tests will be shown by airplane back to Boston to be run off publicly for the first time at Loew's State and Orpheum Theaters.

Friends of the 17 aspiring young actors, 12 lovely actresses, young girls and two handsome young men, and the thousands of us who are frankly curious as to the ability of our own talent may see them on the camera's eye catches them as they would appear in real movie picture production.

For your own opinion as to which of our own talent may see them on the camera's eye catches them as they would appear in real movie picture production.

The final winner in the Boston Evening American Talent Quest will be a movie star. And the results will be in the American just as soon as the judges in California render their decision.

Self-Made Girl

By Hazel Livingstone

CHAPTER FOURTEEN

It wasn't at all the way she'd expected it to be. New York is supposed to be such a cold, unfriendly city.

She'd expected to find friends and a position and a nice place to live, but not the first day.

Not before she'd been lonely and, perhaps a little hungry and frightened.

Claudia and Blanche would be horrified at her going to live with a couple of girls she'd only known a few hours.

But you could see the kind they were—big-hearted and unconventional, but nice girls, just the same.

And the boys were swell, too—interested in art and all sorts of worth while things. Too bad they weren't a little better looking.

Tommy wasn't so bad, but he was awfully slim and scrawny looking and his hair was too long, and King was almost chubby, in spite of his scowled nose and small, eager eyes.

"Think of them, taking her in this way—giving her a job, making her one of themselves! Even giving her a place to live!"

Of course, as an apartment, there wasn't much to be said for it. It was just two rooms, on the third floor of the building that housed the tea room.

"My conviction," Gladys said, a little later, moving magazines off the couch that was to be Linda's, "and there's no use in fling it up, because we have all our nice things downstairs and won't sleep here, anyway. Nobody ever comes up."

A STRANGE APOHE

Not a closet in the place. Just hooks along the walls and clothes hung, those that were on the floor and on the beds and chairs, behind filmy cretonne curtains.

One room was nearly filled with two beds, two dressers and two chairs.

The other held a sewing machine, a work table, on which patches and silk were littered, two wobbly chairs and a packing box and the couch that was to be Linda's.

Roberta, Linda unpacked the things she needed, hung them as carefully as she could. Before she had her bed made up, the two girls were in bed and asleep.

For a long while, Linda lay awake and thought of her new life. Who ever heard of a business run the way this one seemed to be?

The two boys, King Warfield and Johnny Lane, seemed to be equally devoted to both girls. May, the neat Negro maid who did the kitchen work, was apparently the only paid employee.

And who were all these people? Gladys said she had a mother in California, that she was a graduate of the state university and used to work in an office. Dick, who also came from California and had a mother, father and a couple of brothers in Berkeley, described himself as a newspaper woman, but did publicity work when she wasn't helping out in the tea room. The absent Nola was an artist.

In the morning sunlight the rooms were even dingier than they had appeared the night before.

NOLA ARRIVES

The missing Nola, full of apologies for last night's absence, came in at 11, to help serve lunch and brought with her the friend, Paul, the Jew, who explained to Linda, as though it were a point of honor, that he was not a Russian.

"If you like him," Nola said, "you can have him. I've been trying to get rid of him for years. He says too much. Kevin he broke feeding him."

"I assure you," he told Linda, "that it's not so. I am a very light eater. We will dine together very soon, and you shall see. The cost will be negligible."

"I never go out," Linda said, laughing, trying not to be embarrassed by his bold admiration, and the way Nola disposed of him as a gigolo.

But Paul persisted, and Nola just laughed, and before the week was out he had taken her to the zoo, to Gladys' tomb, the Statue of Liberty, the Ghetto, Chinatown, the Battery and was quite frank in saying he'd take her to the theaters and night clubs, if she'd put up the money.

By the end of the second week she was almost blind to the brown wallpaper upstairs and nothing even the cruelest eyes could be bothered by.

Still young, handsome, always well dressed, Paul had no small part in Linda's conversion from the new life. But why didn't he get out and do something instead of sitting around the tea room all the time? Why didn't he work?

"Why should he?" she asked, shrugged, when Linda brought up the question. "He gets by."

Lounge in Luxurious Loveliness These Cool Evenings

Relaxation Fashions

By ANNIE BRINK
Fashion Editor

WE'RE all for a shorter-hour day so there'll be a longer-hour lounging interim between going out or bedtime!

Such a happy situation must be on the minds of manufacturers, because they're turning out such a tempting array of relaxation fashions, for so very little money.

And you can find quite as flattering things in the warm-as-toast group as you can in the silver-wise for bathroom flowers.

If you live in a big house

CHALLIS dirndl house coat, left, in bright colors, with vivid shirring at neck and sleeves; tightened bodice, with funny little fan of pleats in back. Fun to wear! Around ten dollars.

where cold air areas are apt to lurk around corners, look at some chenille-ribbed, princess robes in bright pastels. They're positively yummy, and warm as a heated bathrobe, almost!

Most of these little numbers are of the informal hostess type, so you don't need to scurry into anything else, no matter who bangs the brass knocker as you sit in front of the fire.

These illustrated today are lots of glamor for something around a five dollar bill!

Veriting on the negligee in the street from afternoon fashions, the acetate jersey house coat.

Integrating and young is the challis dirndl affair, embodying some of the best peasant features, like shiny button shirring, and a full skirt with a deftly flattered hipline.

Time Baked Potatoes

By MARTHA LEE

POTATOES are such an ordinary item in the menu that we are more than likely apt to give them too little attention in the preparation of the meal.

As soon as the potato is mature it can be baked. The temperature best for baking 400-425 F. determines the starch, caramelizes some of the surface sugar and therefore changes the flavor.

The pleasing mellowness of a baked potato is gradually lost as the potato cooks or steams. So the cook should do some pretty close timing, to get it done just as dinner is ready. To let steams escape and thus prevent soggy skin, develop, cut a cross in one side of the baked potato as soon as you put it out of the oven.

Then pick it up in a cloth to keep from getting burned and squeeze it a bit, to loosen up the "insides" and make a little of it bulge up into that crisp-skinned shell.

POTATOES WITH SOUR CREAM AND EGGS

1 cup sour cream
2 medium-sized cooked potatoes sliced
1/2 pound boiled ham, chopped
4 hard-boiled eggs, sliced
Salt
Paprika

1 cup butter
1/2 cup cream
2 tablespoons fine bread crumbs
Spread 2 tablespoons of sour cream in the bottom of a lightly greased casserole. Add a layer of potatoes, one of ham and one of sliced eggs. Season with salt and paprika and dot with butter. Add 2 more tablespoons of sour cream. Repeat layers, topping with remainder of sour cream. Pour in milk. Sprinkle top with bread crumbs and paprika. Bake in a very hot oven (450 F.) for one-half hour, or until top becomes nicely browned. Serve in the casserole. Approximate yield, six portions.

CHAPTER 418

MISS MARSHALL had her hand upon the telephone before I had finished speaking.

"That's a splendid idea," she said, her eyes filled with admiration and thankfulness.

She gave the number, and sent a parting query after me as I hurried me through the door.

"I will keep you posted by word the messages, on everything," I promised her, and then Dick was rushing me down the corridor toward the elevator.

"I don't know what to say to him," I said despondently. "We can't very well tell him that we're read the letter he left for Miss Marshall."

"We never can tell him that," Dick said decidedly as we reached the car and he helped me into it. "It may be necessary to tell him she told us some things that were in it, but—"

"I agree with you about the letter, of course," I interrupted him, "but that doesn't solve the problem of what to say to him."

Dick eyed the car with relief. And crossed two streets before he spoke.

"How would it do?" he asked when he had comparatively easy going for the car again, "to tell him that we were anxious about Ronald from something Mann had written, and we thought we ought to ask his advice."

"There's the garage door there," he said as we turned on a side street. "And, look! There's Bratton just going into it. Why, what's the matter?" As I gave a nervous sob of relief.

"I was so afraid," I confessed. "Just so," he said, as he drove the car to the curb and helped me out. "Now you can wait while I lock the car. If you like, and take me in with you, but my judgment is that you'd better tackle him yourself first."

"I know he was right, and I acquiesced quickly. "All right," he said, as we turned on a side street. "And, look! There's Bratton just going into it. Why, what's the matter?" As I gave a nervous sob of relief.

"I know you'll come through. You always do."

"Thank you so much, dear," I replied, "but I don't intend to, and with the familiar hand written, and we thought we ought to ask his advice."

"There's the garage door there," he said as we turned on a side street. "And, look! There's Bratton just going into it. Why, what's the matter?" As I gave a nervous sob of relief.

Costello Rates With State's Best Backs

Only a miracle of misfortune can prevent Bill Ohrenberger's Boston English high school warriors from capturing the championship of the Boston district this fall.

With veterans galore on the varsity squad and with four of the best senior backs in the state in Captain Dai Cuddy, Eddie Costello, Joe Gahen and Al Ohrenberger, the English team must have a serious shot for the district championship of the Commonwealth.

ALL-KNOU-INTU TIMBER

When a team can have four backs who are the best in the state, it is a good sign. And the English team has just such a back in the state who will touch him this fall.

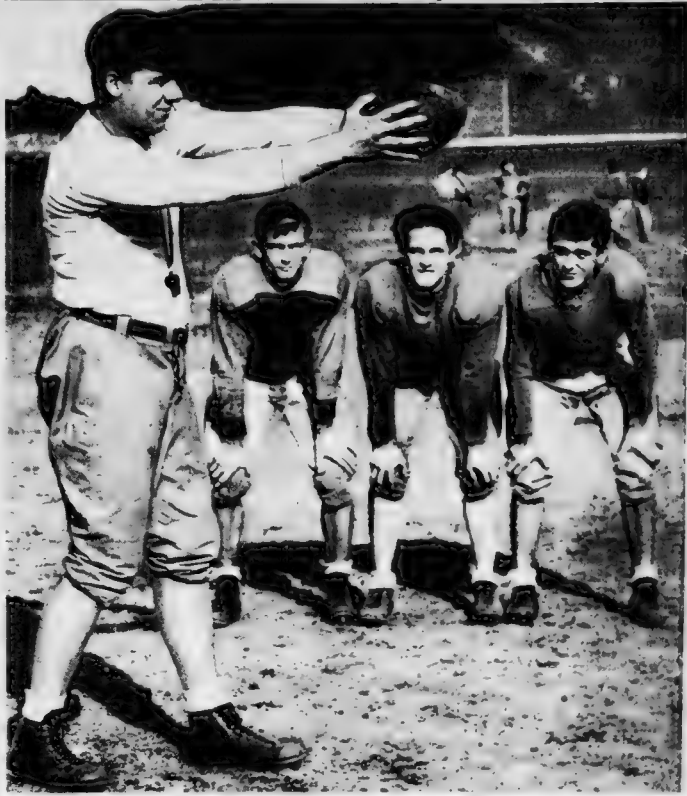

In the opinion of the English team, the state's best back is Eddie Costello. He is a three-year veteran and was mentioned on numerous all-Boston eleven last year. Each Ohrenberger says there isn't a back in the state who will touch him this fall.

The English team is a well-balanced one. It has a strong line, a strong backfield, and a strong forward passing attack. The team is coached by Bill Ohrenberger, a former All-American and a former member of the Boston English team.

THE IRON GUARD

At the back of the English team is a group of players who are known as the Iron Guard. They are a group of players who are known for their strength and their ability to stand up to the toughest opponents.

Gintoff, Ananis, DiNatale All Toe-Clever

The theory that important games may be lost by the point after touchdown has spurred Gil Doherty, Boston College coach, to instruct his backs in the art of converting the extra point after the touchdown.

For ten years under the watchful eye of Coach Doherty, the backs have been practicing the art of converting the extra point after the touchdown. The theory is that important games may be lost by the point after touchdown.

Staple Prices Hold Key to Future

Recession Is Seen Over When They Become Stabilized

By LEWIS HANEY
(Professor of Economics, New York University)

NEW YORK, Sept. 28.—Business activity rounded off and receded a little further last week. The decline, however, is orderly and gradual, with conditions so mixed that most industries and sections may still deny that any recession is under way.

So far, the setback has been only about half the minor reactions of late 1933 or late 1934. It has not yet amounted to the dip in December-January 1936-1937.

There has been no suggestion of panic or financial strain, nor does there seem likely to be any.

This is where the government comes into the picture most decisively. The government cannot be a good business man. It cannot control agriculture and fix prices without doing great harm. But it can still supply public utility.

It may be coincidental that since the reaction in security markets, now after another week has been taken in Washington looking toward financial conditions. Probably, however, this has been done purposely in any case.

Note that just now the same things that will help government bonds and banks are likely to help business and the stock market.

First, the reduction in interest rates. Then the gold sterilization program was set in motion under increase excess reserves. Then it was given out at Washington that conditions in the last few months of corporate earnings were being actively considered. Now, after the weekend, comes the news that the Federal Reserve Board will liberalize their discount rate.

What the last news means is that "easy money" is to be made easier to get. Especially noteworthy is the fact that the move applies to installment plans and loans on improved real estate.

Sugar Areas Benefit

On September 28 the Agricultural Adjustment Administration announced new sugar quotas for 1937 established under the new 1937 sugar act. The total sugar quota for the United States for the calendar year 1937 was placed at 2,042,735 short tons, compared with the 1936 total of 2,042,735 tons, and the initial amount for 1937 established last December of 6,852,676 tons.

Jesse Jones for Judge to End Irene's Profits Tax

Indicates Move Would Be Constructive, Says Rukeyser

By MYRTLE STANLEY RUYSEYER
International News Service Financial Writer

WASHINGTON, Sept. 28.—Jesse H. Jones, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, which in recent years proved to be America's largest lending institution, in chatting with me about business conditions, indicated again that he thought revision of the punitive undivided profits tax would be a constructive move.

Referring specifically to real estate operations, Mr. Jones indicated that the federal tax law tended to discourage the investment of equity capital in commercial and industrial buildings. He said that the federal government, through RFA loans, had been causing the situation somewhat in respect to the flow of capital into dwellings.

Mr. Jones thought that through many cities were overbuilt in 1929, especially in regard to commercial buildings, the growth of the country since that time with a virtual cessation of new construction, had created a surplus. However, Mr. Jones felt that the undivided profits tax had been a factor in this situation.

'Barred From Home' Judge Drives to End Irene's Love Tilt

Major McLaughlin, Wife Called Into Parley

Chicago Sept. 28 (AP)—An attempt to effect a reconciliation between Irene Castle McLaughlin and Major Frederick McLaughlin, judge of the superior court, failed today.

During the morning, Major McLaughlin, coffee merchant and owner of the Chicago Blackhawk hockey team, found an answer in his wife's divorce suit, denying charges of cruelty and accusing his wife of "hardness and reckless extravagance."

Also at issue was Mrs. McLaughlin's petition for temporary alimony, the attorney said temporary alimony of $1500 a month, but the attorney for McLaughlin suggested $500 would be sufficient.

Mrs. Irene Castle McLaughlin, shown here, has been locked against her, on orders of her husband, Major Frederick McLaughlin, whom she is suing for divorce, on grounds of alleged cruelty.

City Board May Get Housing Control

Report U. S. to Drop Old Harbor Village Project

Prediction that the federal government will soon abandon its $10,000,000 Old Harbor Village housing project in South Boston, made by George Greene, vice-chairman of the Boston Housing authority, sent a political tremor through the city today.

City and state officials considered the effect of such a move, which, according to Greene, would place all responsibility for the project in the hands of the five-man City Housing authority, and make it permissible for city taxes to be levied.

"It is very likely that the federal government will sell the South Boston project to the Boston Housing Authority," Greene said. "The authority would then appoint its own manager."

"But before making the purchase the Boston Housing Authority naturally will want to get a very reasonable price because of the tax situation."

Average rental per room on the project will be about $12 a month, he said. The 1000 apartment family, with an income of more than $2000 can secure an apartment.

Under terms of the new Wagoner act, the city is to appropriate $10,000,000 for the project. The city is to appropriate $10,000,000 for the project.
